

November 3, 2011

'11-'12 Eagles Men's Basketball Preview

From left to right: David Poole (#11), AJ Adusei (#12), and Aaron Ram (#13)

Photo credit: Vancouver Sports Pictures

There's practicing ball. Then there's playing it.

For the Kwantlen Polytechnic University Men's basketball team, who's enter their 2011-12 season under the new reign of Detroit-hailed coach Stefon Wilson, this season is going to be all about chemistry -- fans included.

The team opened its pre-season – after a summer-long practice drills under Stefon – to the sounds of the final buzzer drawing 78-38 win for the Eagles in a scrimmage game Sep. 2 against St. Mary's University. That game was matched with another victory in an alumni game that saw this year's roster surpass the former student athletes with 137-90 win.

Despite the Eagles two informal October losses, Wilson says it's going to be a sweat-inducing season filled with palpating games for both players and fans alike.

"From a fan perspective I really do like watching this team play and I really do I think we have good players," said Wilson. "They play hard -- it's about playing hard -- we want to win and it's about leaving it on the court and I think that fans appreciate the efforts."

Boosting chemistry, as Wilson explains is the team's offensive target, also takes route among fans and game-day participation.

Get excited – get to the games.

With internal strengths among newcomers AJ Adusei and David Poole, as well as returning veteran Ali Bosir, the men will play their season-opener Friday Nov. 11 against Victoria's Camosun Chargers. The team's November and December schedule sits packed with home and away games against the Capilano Blues, Douglas College Royals, Langara Falcons, among others.

For the full schedule and times, please click here.

Go Eagles!